By Matt Stromberg
December 20, 2017

From local contemporary art to rare surveys on Latin American modernism, there is plenty of good art to see before the new year.

Cammie Staros: les vases communicants* at Shulamit Nazarian

Cammie Staros's ceramic objects allude to the forms of classical vessels, but update them with neon or metal additions, as well as references to feminism and S&M. Her exhibition les vases communicants pairs these hybrid sculptures with works by other artists who explore the link between antiquity and the present: Fay Ray, Whitney Hubbs, David Korty, Matt Lipps, and Sara VanDerBeek.

When: Closes Saturday, December 23

Where: Shulamit Nazarian (616 N La Brea Avenue, Hollywood, Los Angeles)
